

SEES GERMANY AS MASTER OF WHOLE OF EUROPE

Former Minister of Interior Writes Pamphlet on "World War and Its End."

ENEMIES MUST PAY HEAVILY
Martin Declares Kaiser's Government Will Levy Upon Fallen Rivals a Tribute of From 120 to 150 Millions of Marks.

(Correspondence of Associated Press.)
BERLIN, March 27.—A picture of Europe completely reorganized, with Germany and her allies dominating everything and levying upon their fallen rivals a tribute of from 120 to 150 millions of marks, is drawn by Rudolph Martin, former Minister of the Interior of Germany, in a pamphlet entitled "The World War and Its End" that has just been issued.

The large indemnity which the author believes will be demanded by Germany when she dictates peace terms in London, after two years fighting, is estimated on the basis of war costs of thirty millions of marks to be sustained by Germany, Austria and Turkey, in the proportion of sixteen, ten and four, respectively.

As Germany at the end of the Franco-Prussian war made the French pay two and one-half times what it cost to conduct the conflict, so the writer believes, Germany will make the allies pay similarly at the end of the present war. In addition seventy-five millions will be demanded for the support of dependents of those killed.

The writer sees Germany firmly established along the present French coast, in a position to control both London and Paris, and possessed of an air fleet of many thousands of machines and 20,000 airmen. He sees England forced to consent to the construction of a tunnel under the English Channel, equipped with four railway tracks and an automobile roadway, at both ends of which the German forces are in control.

Russia he pictures as completely dismembered, its territory divided up among neighboring powers, its coffers depleted to the point of bankruptcy, its menace to the German empire forever gone. In the process of dismemberment he predicts the organization of new states.

Sweden, the author believes, will receive Finland; Germany the Baltic provinces and Poland; Austria will take the entire south of Russia, including Kiev and Odessa; Turkey will receive the entire Caucasus, including the government of Saratov; Russia will have to retire westward from the Baltic, the Black and the Caspian Seas.

EVERY STATE WILL BE PROPERLY REMODELED
Serbia is to go to Austria-Hungary, Egypt to Turkey; a part of Arabia to Germany; the latter allies will ally themselves with Germany, Austria and Turkey; and every other state which similarly joins this group will be properly rewarded.

Not only does Alsace-Lorraine remain German, but Belgium is to join it once more as a German possession. Belgium, not only becomes German, but with the Congo, but is to pay an indemnity of 6 to 14 millions of francs within a few years of the close of the war.

Regarding the disposition of the colonial possessions of the allies, the writer goes into little detail, beyond stipulating that England and France must lose Egypt, India, Algiers, Tunis and Morocco as a penalty for inducing their inhabitants to bear arms against Germany.

The Suez Canal, the writer sees permanently in the hands of "our ally, Turkey." After the conclusion of peace, he hopes, English ships instead of longer paying tolls into the pocket of the English-owned Suez Canal Company will have to pay them to "our ally, Turkey."

The heavy indemnities proposed, the writer frankly says, are for the purpose of weakening Germany's enemies that it will be years before they can even contemplate a rebellion against her again. They are supplemented by a taxation and military system from present Belgium to the new Russian border which will strengthen German indefinitely.

Though Germany's territory will be greatly increased in Europe, it must be laid down as a basic principle, in the writer's opinion, that the electorate ought to choose a membership of the Reichstag that must be continued to the old boundaries.

Newly acquired Russian Poland, with its own legislature in Warsaw, may become an adjunct kingdom with Prince August Wilhelm of Prussia as ruler. The Belgians, he believes, may also form a kingdom and govern themselves. The acquired Baltic provinces, as well as the territory taken from France, can, he thinks, without harm have their own parliaments, and live under the direction of an imperial governor general.

EVERY YOUNG MAN SHALL SERVE IN ARMY
He would establish as one of the most important basic principles of the governments of the conquered provinces that every young man who according to the rules laid down in the German empire, is capable of bearing arms shall serve in the army. For the Pole he suggests a service in Erfurt, and for the Frenchmen from Calais or Belfort, as well as the Belgians, service in Bavaria or Wurttemberg.

With the historical example of Luxembourg as a precedent, the writer prescribes that the taxation laws of the empire shall apply to the conquered territory quite as much as the military rules.

Early in his pamphlet the writer voices the expression that England must be invaded and London conquered before the Germans can have been considered winners and masters of the situation. No occupation of Paris or of Moscow alone can accomplish this end.

Both the latter he considers only matters of time, that of the Russian city especially being feasible because of Russia's alleged precarious financial condition. With the Turks working northward and the Austrians advancing steadily, he believes Russia's doom is sealed. In the country's dismemberment, he declares that no weakness should reign, no pettiness should show itself. It must be accomplished resolutely.

"For Germany and her allies," he says, "it is of the greatest importance that Germany secure control of the coast from Roulogne sur Mer, Calais, Dunkirk, and Ostend. The German side of the channel must furnish a broad basis of operations for aircraft, and the ports on the coast must serve as war harbors for German submarines, torpedo boats, cruisers and battleships. While peace after the landing in England demands German supremacy on the sea and in the air over the channel."

"In the peace treaty at London, England must agree to the construction of the railroad tunnel under the channel that has been planned for more than forty years. In view of increasing traffic this tunnel must at least accommodate four railroad tracks, a broad automobile road and an army road."

The writer, suggesting that several German army corps will have to be maintained both in England and in France for a period of from five to ten years, at the expense of the countries defeated, thinks that the necessity must be faced of guarding the English entrance to the tunnel, and of investing about six forts.

Herr Martin, who for long has been an earnest advocate of the airship as an adjunct to military operations, outlines extensive plans for its future use. In France, he says, the German line must be drawn so as to include the cities of Boulogne, Rheims and Belfort, so that an aeroplane can with ease reach Paris within an hour. Since an extensive base for the operation for the 10,000 fliers he believes are needed is required, Germany needs much territory near the French capital.

"If," he concludes his main chapter, entitled "The End of the World War," Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey want for all time to benefit by their alliance in this war, they would do well to prepare a common taxation agreement, to extend from Hamburg to Basra, on the Red Sea, and from Calais to Peking, on the Caspian Sea."
